PROFILE

Entrepreneur, operator, and business professional with experience leading cross-border sourcing, wholesale distribution, and e-commerce operations across the United States and the UAE. Founder of S&N Supplies, a global sourcing and supply-chain business that connects Amazon sellers, e-commerce brands, and retail businesses with reliable products, competitive pricing, and scalable procurement solutions.

My background combines hands-on operational execution with strategic business development, including supplier negotiations, market analysis, international trade, partnership development, and growth strategy. Through Impact Lights and other ventures, I have developed practical expertise in digital commerce, product positioning, customer acquisition, and building systems that support long-term scalability.

Currently completing a Bachelor of Business Administration in Marketing Management at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, where I focus on applying data-driven decision-making, consumer insights, and modern marketing strategies to business growth. My long-term goal is to build and invest in businesses that create sustainable value across global markets while leveraging technology, efficient operations, and strong strategic partnerships.
